Education is expensive! According to reports the cost of educating a child in Bonduel is $17,249. Nationally it is $12,239. St. Paul Lutheran's cost for educating a child is $7,370 per student.

After examining the above figures, I am amazed how St. Paul's tuition is remarkably low compared to nearby private schools. Tuition for the first member child is $1,260 and for a non-member is $2,655. Where does the rest of the fees come from - St. Paul Lutheran Church congregation pays $6,110 for members and $5,885 for non-members first child!

When comparing our students' scores to students in Wisconsin, our students score higher on the Forward Exam - generally 8-10% higher. Yes, we have less students compared to the public schools, but because of that reason our students have more opportunities to interact with teachers. And the biggest benefit of sending your children to St. Paul Lutheran School is for their faith to grow. What is the best reason for your children to attend St. Paul? They learn that Jesus is their Savior from our biggest enemies - sin, death, and hell! They learn that Jesus loves them and that they can trust Him.

Let me tell you about St. Paul Church and congregation. They love the school, they want students to excel. Every dollar given to the school takes away potential ministry to the community of Bonduel. I would love to have a teen center, a home for the elderly, and a larger food bank on the property we own.

Presently, one of our biggest challenges at St. Paul is hiring the best faculty and staff. And once we hire someone we lose them to schools that will pay them more with better benefits. There is already a shortage of teachers, aides, even bus drivers. Since my arrival we have already had a couple of potential teachers elect another school because they were "wooded away" with a bigger signing bonus.

At St Paul we are driven by a commitment to the Gospel. We have a staff who models spiritual development and servant leadership. We have educators who model visionary leadership so our students meet or exceed national academic standards.

We invite you to the
